Dear Parish Family,

We celebrate Father's Day this weekend – a day to give honor to those men who selflessly and courageously live out their vocation as Christian husbands and fathers. A great model for this of course is Christ Himself, the Bridegroom of the Church, for whom he laid down His life on the Cross. That is what a good Christian father does as well, lays down his life for his wife and children – setting aside ambition and earthly glory to care for the most precious gift God has given him, his family, which is the domestic church.

Another great model for fathers is St. Joseph, who cared for the Blessed Mother and the child Jesus. He was put through great trials and struggles in the call God gave him, but he persevered because he knew with total confidence in his heart that God was with him. That's the same confidence the fathers of today need as well. It has never been easy to be a dad, and our world makes it even more difficult. But a father draws on the graces of the sacrament of marriage and lives out this vocation because he realizes that God is with him. It is only with this realization that the struggles are bearable and a father can succeed in living out this vocation.

Like the gospel today, too often fathers feel overwhelmed by the storms of life and turn to the wrong places for help or escape. Only Christ can calm this turbulence. It is to Him we must turn and put our full faith and trust. Jesus is able to give us peace of heart, an inner serenity that allows us to know that things will be fine – perhaps not exactly as we would prefer – but they will be fine as we gain a deeper perspective on life and our vocation.

So today, we not only honor our fathers but we pray for them as well. We pray that they will have the courage to turn to Christ for strength each day as they live out their vocations by laying down their lives in service to their families. We pray that they recognize Christ's presence with them each day, most especially when things get rough. We pray that they are willing to forgive others and accept forgiveness for their own failings through human weakness. We pray that they always strive to be good role models for their children, teaching them by the example of their lives.

The following story summarizes this all. A father, who has been very devoted to his son's development, attends all his games and activities and spends time with him. The man's own mother, a widow, told her son how proud she had become of him, saying, "You are the best dad in the world." Her son responded without hesitation, "No, mom, I had the best dad in the world." The reality of course is that both are authentic Christian fathers, passing on the gift. Let us pray that all fathers do likewise.

A Happy and Blessed Father's Day!

In Christ,
Fr. Joe Previte
